QUICK SNAPSHOT

As commodity prices have been rising, producers started to lock in downside protection, though generally leaving their upside at least partially open.

Similarly, on bushels already marketed as HTAs, producers began to nibble at opening up their upside through Deferred Floor and Range Plans (that were attached to the pre-existing cash contracts). This was seen across the ag complex.

Enhancer Plus Plans were the choice of more neutral producers, especially in next year's crop, though interest in these structures picked up as prices headed higher.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Did you know that SCS recently redesigned its daily account statements?

In the last few months, SCS has worked on upgrading its technology, which included creating new versions of the SCS statements that are saved daily.

To access these new versions, simply open your Google Drive and click on SCS Statements folder. In it, you'll find that the most recent statement is in a new, easy to read format that includes the marked-to-market of each traded commodity in your account, your structured product bushel totals (both accumulated and unaccumulated), and the details of each SCS structure you have on.

These will continue to be saved daily to provide you with complete transparency of what your account looks like on a day-to-day basis.

For additional details regarding SCS Statements, please contact your broker or the SCS Desk.
